Waveland renews efforts to obtain railroad signals

The Waveland Board of Aldermen has renewed efforts to get signals set up at the railroad crossing on Waveland Avenue.

According to Mayor John Longo Jr., the city contacted the State Department of Transportation's Highway Division about eight months ago concerning the signals.

Longo feels the crossing is a safety hazard, and said that reports of a Jan. 13 accident on the tracks may prompt the Department of Transportation to take action.

federally aided program administered through the Highway Division.

The $10,000 will be matched with federal money to pay for flashing lights and other equipment at the Nicholson and Waveland Avenue

The aldermen authorized Longo Wednesday to write a letter to the Highway Department to try to ascertain why installation of the signals has been delayed.

Also discussed at the meeting were plans for a general city cleanup that will include some street paving and the removal of junked vehicles from public property.

The board is expected to take some action on the project at its next meeting, Longo said.

In addition, the board discussed but took no action on plans to reapply for grant funding to pay for the provements.

If funding can be obtained, the city will consider including in its long range plans the installation of a sewage line to the new police station being constructed on Highway 90.

Installation of a line across the highway could lead to future development of the city's sewer.

In other business, the board opened bids on repairs for the city library and took them under advisement; issued parade permits for the Krewe of Nereids parade on Feb. 10 and the Krewe of Triton parade on Feb. 19; and approved correction of an error in a property assessment.

Carlos Cordon of Borgen Engineering said the projects were falling into place easily because they all fit into the overall master plan for the development of the airpark. "We don't have to reinvent the wheel, every time we start a new project," he said. Cordon said the Port and Harbor

Commissioners who were probably critized for the "pie in the sky" ideas included in the master plan when it was drawn up in the 70's, have been proved right by time.

He added that when projects currently under construction or scheduled to be completed before May 1985 are finished, the bulk of the infra-structure of the master plan will be complete.

Improvement projects completed in the past year at the airpark include the construction of a new angar, a parking anron and the reconstruction of Taxiway

The hangar, which cost approximately $180,000, is the only project funded 100 percent by the Port and Harbor Commission.

The apron expansion and the taxiway reconstruction projects were funded 90 percent by HUD grants and 10 percent by the commission. These projects cost $263,000 and $215,000, respectively.

A completion date of before May 1, is anticipated for the water well, water storage tank and the sewage collection and treatment plant, according to Cordon. The 142 feet high water storage tank will be located near the entrance to the park and will have a capacity to hold 250,000 gallons. Construction of the tank was began in November by Caldwell Tank Inc, who was awarded the contract with a low bid of $360.000.

Cordon said of the projects currently scheduled, the water storage tank will take the longest to complete and will probably not be completed earlier than May.

Grand Jury recommends drug education programs, lease renegotiations, planning

BY DENA BISNETTE

Hancock County's January Grand Jury submitted its report to Circuit Judge Ruble J. Griffin Friday after-

Recommendations in the report concerned 16th Section land leases, drug education, the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission, long range planning for the county and reassessments.

According to the report, Hancock County School Superintendent Terrell Randolph addressed the Grand Jury on 16th Section leases, reporting that 75 leases made prior to 1978 will be renegotiated this spring. Randolph said the renegotiation would increase about $800 of annual revenue from the leases to about that Randolph continue working on the renegotiations and that the county consider hiring a land management consultant to assist him in managing 16th Section land. After noting that a number of cases being presented by Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson concerning young people and drugs, the Grand Jury recommended that the county create a task force designed to provide drug education programs.

The task force would include officials of the county and its youth court system as well as church and community leaders.

Also recommended was the reinstatement of the drug education specialist as part of the county's educational system. Copies of this recommendation are to be sent to the State Department of Education and local legislators.

The Grand Jury's recommendations for the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission included the upgrading of Stennis Airport and Port and Harbor facilities, as well as the development of a regular maintenance schedule.

Other recommendations included the development of a long range plan to accomodate the expansion of public facilities and educational and law enforcement needs.

The grand Jury also recommended that the supervisors adopt a formal resolution asking the Mississippi Legislature to correct the assessment of public utilities in connection with the reassessment of property in the county.

In The Circuit Court of Hancock County, Mississippi, January 1985

TO THE HONORABLE J. RUBLE GRIFFIN, CIRCUIT JUDGE, PRESIDING

We, the Grand Jury for January 1985 Term of Court, having been selected, sworn and charged, submit the following final report:

We were empaneled January 14, 1985, and have considered 56 cases of which we returned 49 true bills, two no true bills, one struck from the docket, left three pending to be passed to the next Grand Jury and referred one to other courts.

The Grand Jury recommends that the July 1985 Grand Jury be furnished copies of this report as their first order of business. All county supervisors and administrations of the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland are to be furnished copies of this report as well as U.S. Senators Thad Cochran and John Stennis; also Congressman Trent Lott, State Senators Martin Smith and Gene Taylor and State Representative Walter James Phillips and specifically the Secretary of State of Mississippi, Dick Molpus.

We recommend the duly elected supervisors of this county of Hancock read and study the findings and recommendations of this Grand Jury and make them a part of their.

The Grand Jury heard reports from the following officials: Terrell Randolph, superintendent of Hancock County Schools; Eddie Murtagh, Hancock County assessor and tax collector; Mike Necaise, Hancock County chancery clerk; Ronnie Peterson, Hancock County sheriff, David Watts, director of Hancock County Forestry Commission, and Phillip Langston, Hancock General Hospital administrator.

We are satisfied that these offices are operating efficiently and within the scope of their duties.

In addition, the Grand Jury toured the Hancock Sheriff's Office and Jail, Hancock General Hospital. Hancock County Youth Court building and Superintendent of Education office, Stennis Field Airport facilities, Port Bienville Industrial Park, the Tax Assessor's branch office and the Hancock County Agent and Home Demonstration offices housed in the former Hancock County Home for the Elderly building behind the hospital.

The Grand Jury wishes to commend Investigators Alvin Ladner, Delbert Seay and Joe Pica for their outstanding jobs and professional manner in presenting cases to the Grand Jury.

On Jan. 14, 1985, Terrell Randolph, superintendent of education of Hancock County, spoke to the Grand Jury concerning renegotiation of 16th Section leases. According to Mr. Randolph, approximately 75 leases made prior to 1978 will be renegotiated this spring, resulting in an annual increase of revenue to the Hancock County School system from $800 to a minimum of $16,000.

We recommend the following: 1. That Mr. Randolph pursue the following leases with speed and diligence.

2. That the Hancock County School Board consider the hiring of a land management consultant to help in the better management of these lands.

We recommend Mr. Randolph tor his progressive management practices in the past, and feel that this additional help would enable him to devote more time to the education of the children of Hancock County.

County responsible for dumps, BPC says

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors learned Tuesday that the county is responsible for three illegal dumps on 16th section land. 👉 According to Johnny Biggert, coordinator of the non-hazardous waste section of the State Bureau of Pollution Control, the county must make some effort to close the dumps by May 31.

The dumps, located in Pearlington, Standard and Necaise Crossing, became the center of controversy earlier this week when the supervisors met with Hancock County Superintendent of Education Terrell

Randolph contended that the county is responsible for the dumps, since the school board had made arrangements to lease the land to the county. The supervisors, however, contended that the dumps are a school board problem because the leases on the property were never signed. Ordinarily, Biggert said in a telephone interview from Jackson Friday, the dumps would be the responsibility of the property owner.

However, it was determined Tuesday that the supervisors, since they were believed to have been leasing the land, had already been notified that the three sites must be cleaned.

"The orders were issued the supervisors, and really, that's county waste going out there," Biggert explained.

'I understand they're going to: pass a resolution dealing with this problem at their next meeting," he

Although the county could be assessed a $10,000 fine if the board fails to meet the May 31 closure deadline, definite efforts to clean up the dumps could result in a deadline extension from BPC, Biggert said.

He said an extension is likely because finding a permitable dumping site in a coastal county can take from six months to a year.

"In Hancock County, because of problems with the soil types and restrictions imposed by NASA's buffer zone, the only area we can really look at for a site is the Kiln area," he

The site in Pearlington is definitely not permitable and the sites in Standard and Necaise Crossing may not be, Biggert explained.

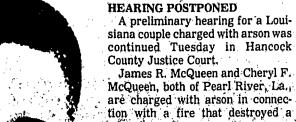

"The board may have to look at some kind of garbage collection system, especially for the Pearlington area," he added.

LOCAL DELEGATION-A group of teachers representing Bay St. Louis, Hancock County and Pass Christian schools display signs Thursday as they prepare to leave for a teacher pay raise rally in Jackson. One Hancock North Central teacher who attended, Veronica Ladner, reported Friday that so many teachers were on hand for the rally that they had to be asked to move away from the center of the State Capital Building because the crowd was putting too much weight on the rotunda area. "Not only wouldn't the legislature support pay raises," she said, "the capital building wouldn't support the teachers either." (Staff photo by Dena Bisnette)

We wish Bay High success in soccor.

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Morning Edition will be held Thursday at the Waveland Resort Inn at 7:30 p.m.

Gaynel Gex Billups, a Bay St. Louis native, who is a representative with Howard, Weil, Labouisse, Friedricks, Inc. will comment on investments.

This should be an interesting program and weare hoping there will be many in attendance.

We enjoy attending the Chamber's Morning Editions and feel there should be more who should try and be there.

He to see you Thursday morning.

Whit talking about special programs, on Wednesday at noon, John Rutherford, Hancock County Circuit clerk, will address the Historical Society at a Dutch treat luncheon.

Rutherford, a native of the county, is scheduled to talk on human interest stories, social and economic development of the county at the turn of the century.

We know 'Big John' has been around a long time, but are not too sure he was here at the turn of the century. It could be that he has gotten his materials for his talk from some of the oldtime residents who are no longer around.

In recent years the Hancock County Historical Society has really been felt in the community and h ve accomplished many projects.

It is good to have such an organization as the Historical Society, and they are always looking for new members.

If you are interested in attending Wednesday's luncheon, call 467-3907 for further information.

- We realize this is about a month away, but the Bay-Waveland Garden Club will sponsor an Antique Show and Sale on Feb. 22, 23, and 24.

This sounds like it will be a great show and progrem and are sure many will be looking forward to date.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFE

Gov. Bill Allain

AGAINST RAISING TAXES

As you probably saw and heard, we delivered our annual State of the State message to the Legislature last week. In order to leave no doubt, I would like to say that the key message in that speech was this:

We can do what needs to be done in Mississippi at the present time without raising taxes.

Let me explain. The state is currently $50 million above our revenue estimates, an increase that will allow us to do some innovative economic development and education work. Although unemployment is still too high, our employment is up by 13,000 new jobs.

The Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway has opened to traffic and is luring new business or expanded businesses into our state. All these factors mean more tax money will be available, not from new taxes but from more people working and paying taxes to the state.

Without a tax increase, the State of Mississippi has money to fund state government as needed and to give raises. That's right-without a tax increase.

With the additional revenue estimate, I am now recommending that public schoolteachers receive an average $1,500 raise, in addition to their experience increment.

I am also recommending that university and junior college faculty receive a five percent raise. During last year's special session, we gave universities an additional $6 million and junior colleges an additional $2 million for salaries.

I have recommended that state employees receive an average 5 percent raise. Additionally, we have recommended $15 million for "realignment" of state employee salaries to make them competitive.

Again, this can be done with the existing tax structure we have, without new taxes.

I cannot in good faith ask for more than I believe the people of Mississippi are able to pay in taxes. I don't think it's fair to ask for a tax increase when I believe many Mississippians cannot afford more

Those of us who hold elected office must always remember that we represent all the people. We cannot be responsive to certain special interests. I believe the fairest way to be involved in state government is to take a hard look at taxes and at

ASPIRIN SUBSTITUTES

Q: How do aspirin substitutes compare with real aspirin?

A: Aspirin substitutes, like aspirin are effective as anti-inflammatory drugs that lower fever and relieve pain, but the substitutes are chemically different from aspirin. Aspirin works in three ways. It works against inflammation, offers relief from pain and brings down fever. Twenty years ago, aspirin was unique in its abilities as a drug. Nevertheless, a search was launched for an aspirin substitute, because aspirin produced undesirable side effects in certain individuals who were unable to tolerate the drug. Others, who had to take medication for anti-inflammatory relief, were taking large dosages of aspirin, because it did not remain in the body very long.

The search for a more compliant drug-one that patients could take more readily with few side effects-ended about 15 years ago. Since then, especially in the past decade, a number of drug companies have developed new aspirin substitutes.

Aspirin substitutes belong to a group called Nsaids, which stands for "nonsteroidal, antiinflammatory drugs." The Nsaids are not only chemically different from aspirin, they are different from each other. Patients may respond better to one aspirin substitute than another, so they offer doctors many alternatives for patients who do not respond well to aspirin.

All of the Nsaids that have become available in the U.S. within the last decade have been tested in numberous studies with patients. which have shown them to be at least as effective as aspirin, and easier to take.

Physicians generally agree that for primary pain problems such as headaches and muscular cramps, either aspirin, acetaminophen, or Nsaids are adequate.

Acetaminophen is an effective pain-relièver and reduces fever, but has no anti-inflammatory proper-

Usually, physicians recommend aspirin for patients who have no allergic problems and do not have to take the medication too long. However, in some situations, aspirin substitutes may be more effective than aspirin. For example, aspirin substitutes taken just before menses are sometimes more effective for relieving menstrual cramps. One aspirin substitute, ibuprofen, became available over the counter. this summer

Formerly dispenses only by prescrition in the U.S., ibuprofen bears the trade names Nuprin and Advil.

Like aspirin, ibuprofen is used to relieve pain associated with headaches, joint inflammation, arthritis, athletic injuries, menstrual cramps and fever.

Aspirin and aspirin substitutes can be dangerous if used inappropriately or by people who may have an allergy or asthma. The substitutes produce a greater risk than aspirin, however, in the elderly or in patients with heart or kidney problems. In all cases, label warnings should be heeded and no medication should be used indiscriminately.

Dashboard blue light still means pull over

Top-mounted, blue strobe lights will eventually replace dashboardmounted blue lights on all Mississippi Highway Patrol traffic law enforcement vehicles, Lt. Col. Kenneth Dukes, assistant chief of patrol, has announced.

However, Dukes said many vehicles operated by the Highway Patrol and other law enforcement agencies in the state will continue to use dashboard-mounted blue lights and said drivers in Mississippi are required by law to yield to them.

'All drivers are required to slow down, pull to the right side of the road and stop any time they see a vehicle behind them with a blue light flashing," Dukes said.

"Criminal investigators with the Highway Patrol, federal agents, detectives for municipal police departments and country sheriff's offices, and many other legitimate officers with powers to arrest people will continue to use dashboardmounted blue lights and drivers must yield to them," Dukes said. Dukes said his announcement was being made to counter confusion apparently created by a recent announcement that dashboardmounted blue lights were being replaced by topmounted strobe lights in one of the Highway Patrol's nine districts.

Traffic law enforcement vehicles in the eight-county district headquartered in Jackson are being fitted with top-mounted lights more rapidly than those in the other eight districts because a man masquerading as a law enforcement officer used a dashboard-mounted blue light to stop and rob motorists on two occasions in December 1984. "From the reaction we have been getting, many citizens thought the announcement in the Jackson area applied statewide, but that is not the

"The announcement was made to relieve the concern some people had expressed over the ability to identify legitimate enforcement vehicles. The announcement, however, does not change state law," Dukes said. Only sworn law enforcement ofyear in writing a new farm program. This will be one of our toughest jobs, securing an acceptable farm program that will provide the legislative strength American agriculture needs and at the same time control government spending.

I told the annual meeting of the Mississippi Seedmen's Association that I hope Congress and the administration could agree on a budget for a sound, comprehensive farm program to replace the 1981 farm legislation, which expires this year.

As chairman of the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee on Production, Marketing and Price Stabilization, I plan to begin hearings soon to gather input from. farmers and others interested in the agricutlural economy in charting the best course to follow in drafting new legislation.

I told the seedmen's association I believe the centerpeice of the new farm program should focus on three areas: the need for a fair and equitable economic return for those investing their labor, capital and land in the production of food and fiber; the need to continue providing adequate funds for agricultural research and development; and the conservation of natural resources such as soil and water.

The importance of modern technology and its impact on agriculture and international events and economics, as well as foreign markets, must also be given careful consideration by Congress and the administration.

Monday evening I was in Yazoo City for a meeting sponsored by the Yazoo County Republican Committee where I briefed the Yazoo group on the 1985 session and the new majority leadership team recently selected for the Senate.

USM awarded marine research grant

The Mississippi-Alabama Sea Grant Consortium has awarded $62,341 to the University of Southern Mississippi for research on energy savings in shipping. According to Dr. Charles L. Mc-Cormick, professor of polymer science at USM, the project, "Hydrophilic Surface Coatings for Drag Reduction in Marine Propulsion," is one of many research projects centering around water-soluble. polymers during the last eight.

The project's goal, he said, is to make polymers for use as coatings on marine vessels to streamline movement. The success of the project, he added, could mean that it is possible to reduce the drag of a ship as it moves through the water by as much as 40 percent.

"The result in energy savings, plus the possibility of increasing speed for the same amount of energy, would result," he said.

Working with McCormick on the project are Dr. Roger D. Hester, a professor of polymer science at USM; and Sarah McCalbe and Andy Campbell, two graduate students in the department.

Hester and Campbell are supervising the measurement of rheological properties (flow behaviors) of the polymers, McCormick and McCable's work involves the synthetic polymer chemistry used in preparing water-soluble polymers that keep their dimensions in salt water-the synthesis aspect.

McCormick added that more than 1.5 million in grants has been received for this and other applications of water-soluble polymers during the past eight years. The grants have been funded by the U.S. Department of Energy as well as a number of industrial companies that include Union Carbide, Dow Chemical, Sun Oil Company and Marathon Oil Company.

Soybean farmers learn irrigation pros, cons

Bý Jimmy Bonner Mississippi Cooperative

Extension Service Irrigating crops can pay off for farmers even in wet years like 1984, farmers were told at the annual Tri-State Soybean Forum in Monroe, La., recently.

But farmers were also warned that investing in irrigation equipment is not a substitute for other crop management practices such as weed and insect control.

About 125 farmers and agricultural officials attended the meeting for information on soybean production and marketing.

Jim Thomas, an agricultural engineer with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, told the farmers that potential for irrigation exists even in areas of high rain-

"In Mississippi, we received an average of 55 inches of rain annually," Thomas said. "But there is still potential for irrigation because we don't know when we're going to get

Thomas said the uncertainty of when rain will come makes irrigating crops in Mississippi difficult, and more management skills are required to apply additional water profitably.

"Irrigation is not a substitute for management problems," Thomas said. "If you have weed problems, they will probably get worse with irrigation."

Farmers in the Mississippi Delta have an advantage in irrigating since they can pump water from wells about 50 feet deep compared to 250 feet or more in other areas. Thomas said. Deeper wells require more energy to pump water.

In irrigating crops, farmers typically channel water down crop rows through long pipes or apply water overhead with a large sprinkler system. The water source usually is an underground well.

Cost of irrigating equipment is an important factor, Thomas said. The base cost of an overhead system capable of watering 120 cares is about $35,000,

Dr. Ken Paxton, agricultural: economics professor at Louisiana State University, said irrigation can reduce drastic ups and downs in soybean yields, a problem that has plagued growers in recent years.

"Irrigation can reduce variability in yields, which helps level out income and reduce cash flow problems," Paxton said.

Paxton said irrigation must increase yields for farmers to justify irrigation costs, and research in Louisiana and other states shows adding water can improve soybean yields substantially.

In one eight-year study, irrigating produced higher yields every year, even in wet years including 1984. Yields in irrigated soybeans also fluctuated less than in non-irrigated crops, Paxton said.

Although yield increases from irrigation varies considerably from farm to farm, Paxton said irrigation typically improves soybean yields by eight to 15 bushels per acre.

"With current prices, a farmerwith 100 or more acres of soybeans would need to increase yields by atleast 10 bushels per acre to justify investing in irrigation," Paxton said.

Larger farms have lower per unit costs from irrigation since per acrecosts decrease with the number of acres, Paxton said. One study showed farmers need about 260 acres of soybeans to break even with irrigating costs.

Buck Harris, a cotton and soybean farmer from Cruger, told the farmers that irrigating soybeans on his farm has never failed to increase yields in the last 15 years. Harris farms about 2,400 acres of cotton and sovbeans.

"In 1984, we produced about 50 bushels per acre on our irrigated soybeans compared to 30 bushels per acre on non-irrigated soybeans," Harris said.

Harris stressed that farmers must control problems such as weeds and insects in crops and use good overall management practices for irrigation to be profitable.

"My experience is that you have to do these things right if you want to irrigate," Harris said. "If you do a poor job in any of these management areas, it will reduce yields.'

In the last six years, Harris has increased soybean yields from irrigation by an average of 16 bushels per acre. He said results from irrigation continue to increase as he learns more about the practice.

"We feel like we can justify the costs of irrigation as long as we have these kind of yields," Harris said.

The soybean meeting was sponsored by the Extension Services in Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas, Delta Council of Mississippi, and soybean promotion boards and associations in the three-state area.

Hancock County sheriff, outlined some of the case load and types of cases (handled by his department). It was noted that many of the cases handled involved young people and drug-related violations.

We recommend the following:

1. That a task force be set up between county officials, Youth Court officials and church and community leaders to set up more educational programs to meet preventative action needs of our young citizens.

We commend District Attorney Cono Caranna for his work with theunstart of the Latch Key Program and Meology Program. We recommend that the task force coordinate with these programs.

2. That a recommendation to reinstate the drug education specialist into the education program be sent to the State Department of Education and that a copy of this be made specifically to Representative Walter James Phillips and Senator Gene Taylor.

The Grand Jury charges the board of supervisors to survey their appointees to each of the various boards that handle county operations, and further recommend that these supervisors seek to appoint persons with expertise in each field

so that Hancock County can have the benefit of knowledgeable appointees

The Grand Jury recommends that the Port and Harbor Commission upgrade and provide a regular schedule for maintenance at the airport and port and harbor facilities. # Supreme Court orders lawyers back to school

The Supreme Court of Mississippi on Wednesday ordered all Mississippi lawyers to begin attending 12 hours of programs on continuing legal education each year.

The court unanimously adopted a proposal submitted by the Mississip-

Effective immediately, Mississippi thus becomes the 15th state in the nation to establish such a program. All lawyers residing and practicing within the state must go to the classroom for 12 hours of actual instruction-not semester hours-of legal educational programs a year.

Failure to comply with the requirements could result in an attorney's license to practice law being suspended.

Persons exempt are those past their 65th birthday, the governor, all state and federal judges, and members of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives.

The Mississippi Research and Development Center will sponsor a Practical Tax Planning workshop for two consecutive nights, Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 21 and 22 from 7 to 10 p.m. in room D-110 at Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College, Jeff Davis Campus, Switzer and DuBuys Road, Gulfport, Interested persons should contact Amos Croutch, USM/MRDC-MAC, Gulf Park, Long Beach, Miss. 39560; telephone (601) 865-4578.

By Dec. 31 of each year, every lawyer must submit a written report to the bar attesting that they have complied with the requirement.

Supervision of the program will come from a nine-member commission on Continuing Legal Education (CLE), appointed by the Board of Bar Commissioners.

All CLE programs must be approved by the commission in order to qualify for credit.

"We are persuaded that the 12-hour minimum is not asking too much for any attorney who wants to advance his profession," he said.

Two Hancock County residents employed at the National Space Technology Laboratories have been honored by the NASA astronaut corps for contributions to the Space Shuttle Program.

R.P. "Rocky" Pullman and Bobby Baxter, both of Pearlington, received the "Silver Snoopy," the astronauts' personal award for professional excellence, on Jan. 10 from astronaut Jon McBridge. He was pilot of the 41-G mission in October

Pullman is captain of the NSTL tugboat and Baxter is a test complex mechanic. Both are employed by Pan Am World Services, the NASA support services contractor at fellow astronauts and I develop our confidence in the Space Shuttle Program through training and experience, and the knowledge that there are men of your ability and dedication supporting this nation's manned space effort. Your performance has been exemplary in all respects, and I wish to express my thanks for your contributions."

Pullman's skills in piloting the NSTL tug, McBride said. "are essential to support engine test firing and Space Shuttle launch schedules. The personal sacrifices which you have made, foregoing weekends and holidays, to move liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen barges between East New Orleans and NSTL are a significant contribution to achieving and maintaining mission success for the nation's Space Program."

McBride told Baxter that his efforts "assure the operational performance of critical test support: systems" in NSTL's Space Shuttle Test Complex. Continuing, the astronaut said, "The record of 100 percent successful support for all static test firings is directly attributable to the initiative, perseverance and attention to detail that you provide."

In presenting the Silver Snoopy pin to Pullman and Baxter, McBride said, "You may display this in the knowledge that it is given only to those whom we regard as the very best in their respective professions."
